CONTROLLER GALPERIN AUDIT OF THE DENSITY BONUS PROGRAM

Earlier this year, Controller Ron Galperin released an audit of the City's Density Bonus program. The audit reviewed projects that utilized the Density Bonus program from 2008-2014 and found the program created 4,463 units total. However, only 329 units were in market rate buildings. The other units were located in 100% affordable housing projects. The audit concluded that the Density Bonus program should be modified to create new incentives, including additional density, allowing micro units and streamlining processes, like site plan review. The audit also recommended new fees for compliance monitoring of density bonus projects. Join us to hear about the audit from Controller Galperin and provide recommendations on revisions to the Density Bonus ordinance, in order to increase the production of housing.

Special Guest: The Honorable Ron Galperin, City of Los Angeles

PUBLIC ART IN DTLA

New development in DTLA is required to support public art. Developments can pay a 1% fee to the City of Los Angeles, Department of Cultural Affairs or provide public art onsite. Now Art LA has created a Developer's Deck that provides information about the different types of public art. The Deck includes cost estimates, installation and maintenance requirements and is a user-friendly guide to encourage onsite public art. Members are invited to learn about this useful tool that will advance public art throughout DTLA.

Special Guest: Carmen Zella, Now Art LA
